

Jane Hagen
Founder & VP Marketing
GroveSite

Jane Hagen is one of the founders of GroveSite, an innovative Web 2.0 collaboration service. GroveSite offers secure, hosted online workspaces that make it easy for global teams to work together. Using simple point-and-click for any non-technical person can create and manage a secure team site to share documents and images, track project tasks and issues and track discussions. GroveSite is used by major retailers and manufacturers to coordinate product design and development. GroveSite is also used to support online communities such as the TradePort Collaborator and various US Commercial Service project teams.

Under Hagen's marketing leadership, GroveSite has been recognized as a leading vendor in Gartner's "Who's Who in Enterprise Social Software" (July 2007) and in Gartner's "Magic Quadrant for Team Collaboration and Social Software, 2007" (October 2007).

Hagen's career in providing technology solutions spans thirty years. Jane worked at the Los Alamos Scientific Lab in the 1970s on state-of-the-art systems. She worked as a technology strategist and consultant at a leading management consulting firm in Boston, where she was the first woman promoted to partner. Hagen complements her technology experience with a deep understanding of the challenges of helping organizations adopt and benefit from new technologies. She has a Masters in Management from MIT and a Bachelor's Degree in Computer Science.
